

Real Estate

More sold signs through fewer document management hassles

Moving Business Forward with Speed and Efficiency

The volume of documentation required to list, market and sell property is difficult to manage for even the most organized real estate office. Maintaining business transactions and ensuring accuracy is further complicated by the need to share files and comply with local and industry regulations.

Using an electronic document management system from Questys, part of the MessageVision platform, realtors can alleviate administrative headaches, and make doing business easier and more profitable. With Questys document management software, real estate professionals can resolve organizational challenges and move their business forward faster, and more efficiently. By having immediate access to any document in any file, agents and brokers can spend more time servicing customers and building their business; and less time shuffling, copying, and filing documents.

Making Real Estate Transactions Easier and More Convenient

By linking scanned images of paper documents with related electronic files and e-mails, Questys automatically creates complete records for every deal.
